

| Source | Type | Details |
|--|---|--|
| The British Civil Wars project  | Website | Articles on the church and religion and biographies on key figures such as Charles I may provide some useful background. An excellent website for use throughout the course. |
| BBC History  | Website | A good, brief overview of the period 1603-1714. The headings 'A Single Monarch' and 'Charles I' will provide good background for the course. |
| Blair Worden, The English Civil Wars 1640–60 (Orion, 2009)  | Book | A very short study of the Civil War period. Chapter 1 will offer a useful introduction to the course. |
| John Morrill, Stuart Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford, 2000)  | Book | A very brief overview of the whole period by a leading academic historian. Chapters 1-3 (32 pages) will provide a very solid introduction to the course. |
| Monarchy presented by David Starkey  | TV series Available via 4OD | Episode 10 – Stuart Succession – offers an engaging overview of political and religious developments, 1603-1642. |

| | | |
|--|----------------------------------|---|
| | | Episodes 11-12 also cover later periods of our course. |
| HA Podcast Series: James VI and I to Anne  | Podcasts | Podcasts written and delivered by leading historians of the period. Subscription required, but students with access to the school ICT systems can access them all via shared areas>history>read history>NEW A-LEVEL>UNIT 1C REVISION AND INDEPENDENT LEARNING. 'The Early Stuart Parliaments' and 'The Road to the English Civil War' will be particularly useful. |
| In Our Time  | Radio series and podcasts | Academics discuss key themes in the history of ideas. Lots are relevant to our course, including 'Republicanism', 'the Restoration' and the 'Glorious Revolution', Especially useful before starting the course would be 'the Divine Right of Kings' and 'the British Monarchy' |